Reviews

A high quality pdf as well as the typeface applied was exciting to see. It really is written in simple words and phrases rather than difficult to understand. You will not really feel monotony at any time of your time (that's what catalogs are for relating to in the event you question me).

Forgotten Books, United States, 2015. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 229 x 152 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from Who s the Boss? Scene: The living room in the Smith home. Door C. leading to the hall. The room is well-furnished in a prim and nothing-to-be-moved style. A chair stands near the door, and the library table is covered with fishing paraphernalia that is very evidently just bought. The price tags are still on and the wrapping paper is lying in a careless bundle at one side. At the rise of the curtain Mr. Smith is discovered fussing with a reel and whistling happily under his breath. He is a man of about forty, very quiet in manner, and, until later in the act, very much overawed by his wife whenever he is in her presence. He wears a neat business suit. Mrs. Smith (out in the hall). When you have finished with the scrubbing, Nancy, you may polish the silver. And don t forget to let me know when its train time. She comes into the room. She is also about forty years old and is rather stout, with a set chin, and her hair tightly drawn in a knot at the top of her head. She is dressed in a stiffly starched, perfectly ironed white dress, made long and full in the skirt. At her entrance and her disapproving glance at the mussed wrapping papers, Smith ceases, his whistling and hastily begins folding the wrapping papers into neat piles. Mrs. S. H m, what s this? Smith. These are my fishing things, my dear. Mrs. S. Humph! (She reads a tag.) Four dollars for that! Smith (nervously). Fishing things are - er - rather expensive, my dear. Mrs. S. It would seem...
