Excerpt: .smith or workman in iron; and a labyrinth with them is a Wayland house. It is in the Icelandic Sagas, remarks Depping and Michel,¹ that Veland is the subject of long romantic fictions, and the story regarding him forms one of the oldest fragments of this poetical literature. It has been attempted to trace the romance to a historical period, --to the reign of King Nidung, who appears to have lived in Sweden in the 6th century of our era, and who is reported to have been the protector of the smith. But there is nothing historical in this, and if on the one hand such has been claimed for it, on the other hand it is as likely to belong to Scandinavian mythology. We must not forget that the Teutonic word Welsh, Wilisc, or Waelisc, was the term for stranger or foreigner, and...
