WHEN Dingman, the fate game-warden, came panting over the mountain from Spencers to confer with young Byram, road-master at Foxville, he found that youthful official reshingling his barn. The two men observed each other warily for a moment; Byram jingled the shingle-nails in his apron-pocket; Dingman, the game-warden, took a brief but intelligent survey of the premises, which included an unpainted house, a hen-yard, and the newly shingled barn. Hello, Byram, he said, at length. Is that you replied Byram, coldly. He was a law-abiding young man; he had not shot a bird out of season for three years. After a pause the game-warden said, Aint you a-comin down offn that ridge-pole Im a-comin down when I quit shinglin, replied the road-master, cautiously. Dingman waited; Byram fitted a shingle, fished out a nail from his apron-pocket, and drove it with unnecessary noise. The encircling forest re-echoed the hammer strokes; a squirrel scolded from the orchard. Didnt I hear a gun go off in them alder bushes this morning inquired the game-warden. Byram made no reply, but hammered violently....
